

An Investment Option for a Challenging Environment

Investors surveying today's investment landscape are finding stocks at lofty valuation and bond markets impacted by rising interest rates. An allocation to alternative investments, like institutional credit, may help investors meet today's investing challenges.

A risk-adjusted income strategy

Institutional credit investments are typically non-correlated to the broader markets, and seek to lower volatility while offering income. The Resource Credit Income Fund (the "Fund") offers access to institutional credit investments in both public and private markets in order to seek risk-adjusted income.

Quarterly Dividend (per share)*

Q2 2017	➔	$0.185
Q1 2017	➔	$0.185
Q4 2016	➔	$0.175
Q3 2016	➔	$0.175

The Fund focuses largely on floating rate instruments, which may generate incremental income as interest rates rise.

An alternative to the traditional portfolio

Equities may offer capital gains, but at the potential cost of greater volatility. Bonds, on the other hand, may help lower portfolio volatility, but expose investors to interest rate risk.

Volatility

Since its inception, the Fund has generated nearly one-third of the volatility of the S&P 500. Lower volatility means that the Fund's performance has fluctuated less over time.

Definitions

Volatility is a statistical measure of the dispersion of returns for a given security or market index. Volatility was measured by using the annualized standard deviation. Commonly, the higher the volatility, the riskier the security.

The S&P 500 Total Return Index is a stock market index based on the market capitalizations of 500 large companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange or the NASDAQ. The Total Return index assumes that investors reinvest dividends.

The Barclays U.S. Aggregate Total Return Value Index is a broad-based flagship benchmark that measures the investment grade, U.S. dollar-denominated, fixed-rate taxable bond market. The index includes Treasuries, government-related and corporate securities, MBS (agency fixed-rate and hybrid ARM pass-throughs), ABS and CMBS (agency and non-agency).

Investing involves risk. Investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate, and an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. Alternative investment funds, ETFs, interval funds, and closed-end funds are subject to management and other expenses, which will be indirectly paid by the Fund. Preferred securities are subject to credit risk and interest rate risk. Convertible securities are typically issued as bonds or preferred shares with the option to convert to equities. As a result, convertible securities are hybrids that have characteristics of both bonds and common stocks and are subject to risks associated with both debt securities and equity securities. Issuers of debt securities may not make scheduled interest and principal payments, resulting in losses to the Fund. Typically, a rise in interest rates causes a decline in the value of fixed income securities. The use of leverage, such as borrowing money to purchase securities, will cause the Fund to incur additional expenses and magnify the Fund's gains or losses.

There currently is no secondary market for the Fund's shares and the Fund expects that no secondary market will develop. Limited liquidity is provided to shareholders only through the Fund's quarterly repurchase offers, regardless of how the Fund performs. Investments in lesser-known, small and medium capitalization companies may be more vulnerable than larger, more established organizations. The sales of securities to fund repurchases could reduce the market price of those securities, which in turn would reduce the Fund's NAV.
